PRECISION LASER DETAILING

Artiem precision laser detailing is a designer-led way to translate graphic ideas into crafted, architectural surfaces—across timber, glass, stone, CFC, textiles, plasterboard and selected specialty materials in large format sizes (approx. 3500 x 1400mm). This brochure showcases a curated set of precision laser detailed samples to illustrate the capabilities and quality, depth, tonal contrast, and surface response achievable through precision laser processing.

Every piece is inherently unique. Even with the same artwork, the final result will vary depending on the material's density, grain direction, and natural character—especially in timber, where the laser interacts differently across growth patterns. These nuances are not “inconsistencies”; they are part of what gives engraved work its premium, one-off authenticity.

Precision laser detailing can be fully customised to your project requirements—scale, placement, composition, and finish direction. You can collaborate with ARTIEM through an in-studio, remote, or hybrid design session, or you can send your own artwork and we'll guide you through material selection, test sampling where required, and final approval before production.

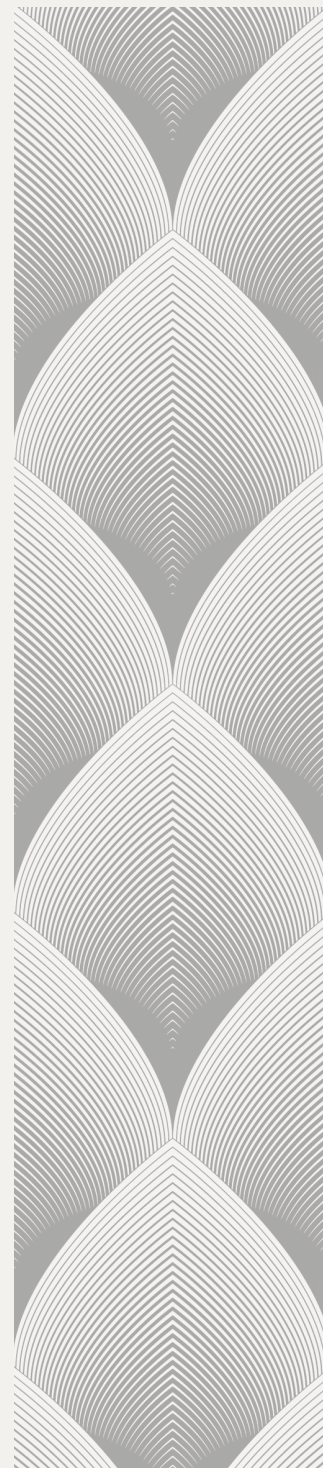

Designed with you. Proven through samples. Crafted for architecture.

Where materials meet performance.

A minimalist interior scene featuring a small table with a coffee set, a chair, and a textured wall. The table is a simple, dark metal frame with a light-colored top, holding a white coffee cup and saucer, a black coffee cup and saucer, and a white mug. To the right is a black Eames-style chair with a wire mesh back. The wall is covered in a textured, brown fabric or paper with vertical lines. The floor is dark and reflective.
